

A watercolor illustration of a dirt path winding through a forest. The path is light brown and textured, leading from the bottom right towards the center. The trees on either side are painted in various shades of green, with some hints of yellow and red, suggesting a late summer or autumn setting. The background is a soft, hazy mix of light green and yellow, creating a sense of depth and atmosphere.

We read to know we are not alone.

— C. S. Lewis